OF Mason County.

Gov. Beckham has issued a proclamation requesting a general observance of Labor day, Monday, September 1, by cessation from ordinary and public business as far as practicable.
Capt. C. C. Callum has filed an appeal with the Controller of the Treasury from the action of the Auditor of the War Department in allowing Kentucky the sum of $67,960.65 in payment for Spanish-American War soldiers' services. A difference of about $30,000 is claimed for the soldiers.

The body of Miss Mabel O'Keefe, daughter of Judge O'Keefe, who was drowned in the Ohio river at Fernbank, Ohio, was found Monday near Lawrenceburg, Ind. An inquest was held and the body was sent to St. Sterling where the burial took place Tuesday afternoon.

The products of this valley now being sent to market by Col. Jay H. Northup, of Louisville, amount to about a train load per day. A few men like this in the Big Sandy Valley would make it one of the busiest sections in the entire country within the next five or ten years. His business has always been of the kind that brings in money from the outside world and money centers instead of gathering to himself what was already here. During the past thirty-five years he has brought in enormous sums of money into this section, and all but a small margin of it has gone into the pockets of the people. Without him the Big Sandy Valley would have been far behind what it now is.

Prof. J. F. Bailey has closed a deal for the Ian Rice land on Jones creek.
C. W. Brummett has sold his farm at Hellsburg school to Robert Stafford.
Hugh Preston has begun the construction of a good frame house for a residence on Third street.
Mrs. Lee Patrick has bought a lot on Fourth street and will build a residence at once.
Hon. John W. Langley passed down yesterday enroute to Washington.
D. J. Wheeler and family are visiting relatives in Magoffin county.
Mrs. Amanda Adams, of Silversville, is visiting relatives and friends here.
On last Saturday Milton Music and William Gose had a difficulty in which Gose was killed. The children of the two men had had some trouble at school and Gose's wife and another woman went down to Music's to investigate the matter or to settle it in some way. Gose went along also and when they got to Music's place the woman went in, Gose remaining in the road. The woman began throwing rocks in the house and Gose raised up and Music shot him. Music and some witnesses say that Gose fired the first shot, but other witnesses say that Music fired the first shot and that Gose fell and then raised to his knees and fired one shot with a double barrel at Music. Gose's wife then took the gun and fired another shot at Music. Gose died in a few hours and Music came to town and surrendered himself to the Sheriff. His examining trial is set for today.

PIKEVILLE.

Two people of Pikeville, on account of dusty streets, and the neighboring farmers on account of crops, are praying for rain.
Business continues to be lively here. Pikeville is growing in size and population, and also in business facilities.
The addition to the Pikeville College Institute is almost completed.
James Hatcher is erecting some beautiful cottages in the upper end of town.
We have four hotels and three boarding houses and quite a number of private rooms and built for rent and everything is "chuck full." We have three livery, two blacksmith and wagon shops, eight general stores, two clothing stores, and four grocery stores. All doing a good business. We have four churches and two schools. We also have more doctors and lawyers than we have time to count just now.
More business, more capital, more new comers—if they are good ones, is what we want to encourage us. We trust that the incoming capitalists will so conduct their business that both native and foreigner may be mutually benefited by trade and social intercourse.
Some of our people look upon the foreigner with suspicion and distrust, some even with contempt, some look upon them as kind of superior beings who have just come down from heaven but forget their wings, some try to imitate their ways and get themselves in many funny and awkward shapes in doing so, but a great majority look upon them in a sensible way and consider them as equals, human beings like ourselves, all children of the same heavenly Father, all brothers in the great family of God. They extend a hearty welcome and say to others come and seek happiness here in the free air of the everlasting hills, which are stored with natural wealth enough to support millions of inhabitants for thousands of years. Let the foreigner, however, who calls us more native and country gentlemen remember that the natives were here first and have a right to dwell in the land of their fathers.
Miss Carrie, daughter of John A. Bils, returned Sunday from an extended visit in Catlettsburg.
W. H. Pinson has been calling on our merchants.
Miss Nora Brown, of Virginia, sister of Mrs. Ballard Weddington, is visiting friends and relatives here and at Coal River.
Our young newspaper, The Pikeville Independent, is doing a promising business.

BOONS CAMP.

On last Friday Milton Music shot Willie Gose. The ball took effect in the head and he died in the right time. He died Saturday. Mrs. W. C. Adams and Holbrook, of this city, were in attendance.

A new congregation was present and some striking interest manifested in the Sunday school. It was organized at the M. E. Church, South, Sunday morning.
Prayer meeting Sunday afternoon at half past two o'clock at the church.
S. W. Ward, of the firm of Mallett & Ward, of this place, has recently lost by death a mother, a wife and a little boy today.
Rev. James W. Mallett, of the United Baptist church, preached two short sermons Sunday.
Dr. John P. Wells, and S. W. Ward attended the regular meeting at Friendship church on Sunday.

INEZ.

At an early hour Sunday morning a pretty wedding ceremony was performed in the parlor of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Newberry of this place. The contracting parties were Miss Jane Newberry and Mr. Rogers Keach, a rising young business man of Williamsburg, Va. The officiating clergyman was Rev. H. B. Hewitt, of Louisville. It was a quiet affair, but never a crowd gathered to witness the marriage of two more worthy young people. The bride is a Christian young lady whose spotless character, phlegmatic disposition and unassuming manner have endeared her to all who knew her, and all recognize in her the characteristics of exemplary womanhood. The groom is well known in Kentucky and West Virginia. He is a highly esteemed young man with rare business qualifications and has a brilliant future. The bride and groom left immediately for Williamsburg where they will make their home and where the groom was employed to go to work because of business demands. They give a new ray of hope to the same old man that home under which his bride has been taught from infancy to love and adore him who provides over the destiny of man a character and we know they will prosper together for no harm I am sure can happen to the good.

We had a fine rain here this morning.
Our Sunday school at Banyan Camp is being carried on in most excellent order by its efficient Supt. E. Z. Dutton, teachers, T. J. Boop, W. C. Blackstone and Hetherford Spars.
The attendance ranges from 25 to 100 persons every Sunday. We had a Sunday school once before that took the banner in this circuit, under the leadership of J. H. Adams, but the Sunday school at this place was far ahead of any thing yet. All parties and denominations are more or less interested.
Mr. Vickers and wife, of Pikeville, are here visiting Mrs. Maynard, the mother of Mrs. Vickers.

"An Earthly Immortality."

The announcement that Bishop H. C. Morrison, of the M. E. Church, South, would preach at the South Methodist church last Monday night drew an audience that packed the house from porch to pulpit. Years ago the reverend gentleman, not yet invested with the dignity and honor of the Episcopate, had preached in this vicinity, and knowing what to expect they crowded the church when he came again. And they were not disappointed. He preached a sermon on the good fortune of fanatics to hear a better or as good a sermon as the one Bishop Morrison delivered in with last Monday night. He chose for his text a selection from the grandest funeral sermon ever preached—the discourse of Christ over Lazarus. Or would it be better to call it a resurrection sermon? But these are the words: "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." It was simply impossible to reproduce the wonderfully attractive and interesting sermon which followed the utterance of this text. A complete stenographic report would give the language, but where would be the rich intonations of the musical voice the winning smile, the flash of the eye? These are not in these dull lines. They tell how the speaker told of the various kinds of lives by means of how they might live we could achieve an earthly immortality. It is what we do for God and humanity that makes the life immortal. There is no death to true life. But a selfish life is not, can not be, a true life. She who broke the alabaster box and poured its precious contents on the head of her Lord was a grand example of unselfishness and heartiness. She didn't wait to open the box and savor the perfume, but she poured it out for the benefit of all. The selfish man never had a more fitting figure than when the Bishop held him up as a huge spider, weaving a net and appropriating and consuming all that came into its meshes. And there were men so utterly absorbed in self that there was a gulf between them and their families. The speaker had seen such men whose children absolutely staid about from them, chilled and hungry for companionship. Their families were glad when death took the husband and father, and the best such men could do was to die.
The speaker thought that a sermon, making its silvery way from its source in the mountains and through the meadow one of nature's pictures of a true life. It could be seen afar off, it sparkled and shone, it fed what it touched, and seemed to exist for humanity, the difference between the staid and the saint is that while the staid is unmoved, all live forever or somewhere, the true life will not begin until he becomes a saint.
A lot of new terms have come into use. Turning around, beginning over, confessing Christ, quitting your meanness, etc. These are all very well as far they went. To be a gentleman a man should quit his meanness, for decency's sake if for nothing else. To be a Christian and live the true life there must be a conversion, grace, and through. The speaker had no patience with the man who declared it made no difference what you believe as long as you get right. It does matter what you believe. A man says, when asked why he does not join the church, that he believes in the religion of his wife, or his sister, or his mother. He does not say to his wife, if he believes in it he would invest in it. "I am not here to split hairs over the difference between faith and belief. But I want to say to you that what the Master meant when he uttered the words of my text was this: 'He who liveth and believeth in me shall never die.' A merchant puts his time and capital into dry goods, and tells and labors, and lives better on the seafarer and the yardstick because he believes in dry goods. And if he is living the true life he will give thirty-six inches to the yard! If he believes in real estate he buys by the acre and sells by the lot and on a rising market. If he believes in his stock he buys in a large herd and when he dies he should have a barren house erected over his grave in place of a monument. And some of these men invest ten thousand dollars in his horse and on cents in his boy, because he believes just that much more in the horse.
"I am not a spiritualist, neither am I a Christian Scientist, nor any other sort of a crank. I have always prayed that God would keep me from being a crank. But I believe that our dead come to us. Not bodily, but as ghostly visitants, but they come by their influence. And their coming at the close junctures of life have saved many a soul from despair, woe and ruin." The speaker then gave one or two instances of troubling persons, who, after being told the beautiful truth of his position, he then asked us if we were so living that we would do this earth would make it a place where we would not need to be, and prayed this, "O God, if thou wilt, give us a sure cure, a permanent better life."

COUNTY FAIR.

September 26th and 27th the Dates Fixed For This Year.

The Lawrence County Fair and Farmers' Institute will be held at Louisa this year on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 26th and 27th. The program and list of premiums will be published in the News as soon as completed. The premium list will cover about the same products as last year.

This is going to be a very interesting and instructive affair. The interest increases each year and the class of products shows the result of the better knowledge and greater care and pride which is resulting from the Lawrence county Fair and Institute.

Commissioner of Agriculture I. B. Hall has promised to be present at this year's fair, and also to send other competent speakers to aid in the work of the Institute. Every farmer in this section who takes any interest in his chosen occupation should be present at this meeting. All are sure to profit by it.

Lawrence Circuit Court.

Circuit Court is in progress here. Court convened in regular session last Monday, with Judge Kinney and Attorney Redwine in their places.

Judge Kinney's charge to the grand jury was one of the strongest ever heard here and will doubtless bear good fruits. The jury are composed of good men and they are "going after" the law breakers in a way that will put down crime, if followed up from court to court.

Two liquor cases resulted. In acquittal because the wrong parties were indicted. In two cases against "Hen" Higgs the jury gave him the extent of the law—$100 in each. Several small cases were tried Monday and Tuesday, but most of the docket was continued for various reasons.

Judge Kinney instructed the grand jury that it is now an offense for one person to even give another any liquor in a local option district. This is under the new law enacted by the late Legislature.

The case of Noah Kelly, charged with the murder of Lyle Hicks, is now on trial before Judge Kinney and the following jury: George Sheppard, Will Morris, H. H. Corde, Wesley Hays, Zach Webb, Jas Evans, Milt Thompson, Dolly Hinkle, J. B. Clayton, Frank Maynard, James Johns and Robert Mead. The trial will probably consume the remainder of the week. A former trial resulted in a disagreed jury.

At the time of going to press the case of the Commonwealth against George Cooksey charged with the murder of Ralph Marcano, of Fallsburg, was called and both sides announced that they were ready and the trial will begin Friday at ten o'clock.

The jury are as follows: GRAYSON: Alexander Hicks, Sr., J. R. Hille, Clifton Dean, Joe Howling, John H. Wilson, H. D. Branch, J. G. Berry, A. Collinsworth, David R. Higgs, Layne Cartmell, Charles W. Diamond.

PETER JURY: G. L. Riffe, Jack Baker, James Y. Carter, H. B. Salter, John F. Pinner, George Sheppard, L. M. Barred, Felix Adams, L. H. Ferguson, A. S. Tilkerson, John H. Preston, Henry Preston, Milt Thompson, Jas. A. Rice, Enoch Kitchen, James Evans, John D. Short, Frank Witten, Ira H. Borders, Brack Holbrook, A. J. Conley, George L. Yates, Isham Honeck, Meredith Ross.

Work Suspended.

Work on Big Sandy Lock No. 2, at Kavanagh, has suspended, the supply of cement having been exhausted. The U. S. Engineer has contracted for more cement, but the delivery is too slow to keep the contractors busy. It requires over two car loads per day to keep the three at No. 2 busy.

Parland cement is the kind used, and it is very scarce now. The acid strike has forced many of the cement plants to shut down. This delay will prevent the completion of Lock No. 2 this year and is therefore quite a serious matter to the contractors, who had a competent and well organized force at work when the supply was exhausted.

Mrs. Rebecca Dobbins died at her home near Gallup last Thursday, after an illness of 21 days, with flux. The burial took place on Saturday at the Peck graveyard. Mrs. Dobbins was 62 years of age, the widow of F. M. Dobbins, who died two-and-a-half years ago. She was first married to Henry Burke. There is one son by this union, G. L. Burke. The children from a second marriage are Monroe F., John E., Frank E., Sheridan and Emma. Mrs. Dobbins was a good Christian woman and her death was a great sorrow to her family.

N. & W. Through Cassville.

At a meeting of the town council of Cassville Tuesday, the N. & W. railroad was granted the desired concessions. It now seems quite probable that the road will go through Cassville, though the officials have not yet given out their decision. Work is beginning all along the line except on this short section.

The Commercial Department of the Ashland Parochial School under the supervision of Sister Anastasia, assisted by a competent teacher of commercial branches, will resume studies Sept. 4th. Boarding pupils will hereafter be received by the school, Terms very moderate.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Richard L. Davis, Catlettsburg, has been granted a pension of $6 per month.

A twelve pound son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Cyrus, of Durbin, yesterday morning.

John Swearington, Olive Hill, has been granted a pension of $12 per month for service in war with Spain.

Mrs. Katherine Houshell, widow of Capt. Wash Houshell, died at Catlettsburg Friday evening from the effects of a fall received several weeks before.

The residence of Willie Richmond, of Inez, was burned with its contents, including valuable papers belonging to the Northern Coal and Coke Company. The fire was caused by a defective flue.

Mrs. Ida Fischer, wife of Capt. August Fischer, a Civil War Veteran, died suddenly at Ashland while talking to her husband and family. She leaves two sons and three daughters.

Four prisoners in the Frankfort penitentiary made a sensational effort to escape one morning last week. They were: Wallace Hisslop and Thos. Mulligan, of Covington; Laylaette Brooks, of Morgan county, and a negro, Fred Ransom, of Louisville. They overpowered and disarmed some guards and then forced Foreman Willis, of Clark county, to stay with them. By keeping Willis between them and the prison officers they saved themselves from being shot. The desperadoes took refuge in an upstairs room and held the fort for four hours during which time the greatest excitement prevailed in the prison and throughout Frankfort. Warden Lillard decided to starve them out, and when the convicts learned that they began to offer terms of surrender. The Warden finally agreed to allow them to surrender if they would first give their arms to Warden and march out to him with their hands above their heads. They agreed, but as they were coming to the door one hand down toward his side and a guard instantly shot him. Death resulted the same evening. The convicts seemed especially desirous of killing Capt. Madigan.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 8.—East Tennessee coal operators are interested in the proposed extension of the Ohio River and Charleston railroad (the Samuel Hunt property) to reach the coal fields of Southwest Virginia and to connect with the Seaboard Air Line at Lincoln, N. C. They say that this will put the Virginia mines in direct competition with the East Tennessee mines in one of the most paying territories in the South, the Carolinas. The East Tennessee mines ship vast quantities of coal to the Carolinas, and it is this O. R. and extension is consummated they are anxious for a road from this city to the Carolinas to enable them to get competitive rates to enter that territory to meet the Virginia competition.

The extension of the L. & N. through the East Tennessee coal field, and into Knoxville to connect with the A. K. and N. or connection to Atlanta, will it be believed, afford lower rates to Georgia points from the local coal fields, but operators say that the Georgia business is a small portion of the business done by East Tennessee mines. However, large shipments of coal are made from here to Georgia cities and towns.
